ORDER GRANTING TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER, ASSET FREEZE, AND OTHER EMERGENCY AND ANCILLARY RELIEF, AND SETTING HEARING DATE ON PLAINTIFF’S MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Before the Court is the Motion to Modify Hearing Date and Extend TRO as to Defendant Ford or in the Alternative to Enter New TRO as to Ford [ECF No. 58], filed by Plaintiff Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”). On January 25, 2018, the Court issued an ex parte order imposing a temporary restraining order (“TRO”) against Defendants AriseBank, Jared Rice Sr., and Stanley Ford, and scheduled a preliminary injunction hearing for February 8, 2018. Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(b)(2), the Court extended the TRO through March 13, 2018, and set a preliminary injunction hearing for that same day. On March 9, 2018, the SEC, AriseBank, and Rice filed an Unopposed Motion to Enter an Agreed Preliminary Injunction. Ford did not indicate whether he agreed to the preliminary injunction. The Court granted the Unopposed Motion, entered the agreed preliminary injunction as to AriseBank and Rice, and canceled the preliminary injunction hearing set for March 13, 2018, as to AriseBank and Rice.

The SEC now moves the Court to reschedule the preliminary injunction hearing as to Ford from March 13, 2018, to March 19, 2018. The SEC argues that there is good cause to move the hearing because Receiver Mark Rasmussen is unavailable to testify. The SEC states that the Receiver's "testimony is crucial to the SEC's case against Ford." (Mot., ECF No. 58, at 2). In the alternative, the SEC asserts that the evidence in the record satisfies the requirements for a new TRO against Ford. (Id. at 3).

A court may extend a TRO for "good cause." FED. R. CIV. P. 65(b). Courts have found good cause to extend TROs, for example, where the court needed "time to fully consider the various arguments and motions of the parties;" where the moving party needed additional time to prepare and present its preliminary injunction, despite diligent efforts; and where the moving party was continuing to attempt to serve the defendants and obtain more information about the case. See, e.g., S.E.C. v. Comcoa Ltd., 887 F.Supp. 1521, 1526 n.7 (S.D. Fla. 1995); Flying Cross Check, L.L.C. v. Cent. Hockey League, Inc., 153 F. Supp. 2d 1253, 1260 (D. Kan. 2001); SEC v. One or More Purchasers of Call Options for the Common Stock of CNS, Inc., 2006 WL 3004875, *1–2 (E.D. Pa. 2006).

Here, the Court need not determine whether good cause exists to extend the TRO against Ford, because the Court finds that the SEC has shown that a TRO against Ford is appropriate under Rule 65. The evidence already in the record, along with the new evidence that the SEC filed in support of its Motion to Extend the TRO satisfies the requirements for a TRO. Therefore, having considered the SEC's motion, its brief in support, its appendix (including declarations and other exhibits), the evidence already in the record, and the argument of counsel, the Court finds:

1. This Court has jurisdiction over the subject matter of this action and over Defendant Ford, and the SEC is a proper party to bring this action seeking the relief sought in its Complaint and in its motion.

2. There is good cause to believe that Defendant Ford has engaged, is engaged, and, unless enjoined, will continue to engage, in acts and or practices that constitute and will constitute violations of Sections 5(a), 5(c), and 17(a)(2) of the Securities Act of 1933 (“Securities Act”) [15 U.S.C. §§ 77e(a), 77e(c), and 77q(a)(2)] and Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (“Exchange Act”) [15 U.S.C. § 78j(b)] and Rule 10b-5(b) thereunder [17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5(b)].

3. There is good cause to believe that Defendant Ford used improper and unlawful means to obtain investor funds and assets, as described in the SEC’s Complaint, its accompanying motion and brief, and its prior filings. There is also good cause to believe that Defendant Ford may dissipate assets and, if he does, irreparable injury or harm would result to investors.

4. There is good cause to believe that the assets, in whatever form they exist, that are owned, controlled, or possessed by Defendant Ford should be frozen to preserve the status quo and to prevent any misappropriation, misapplication, dissipation, or other action taken to the detriment of investors.

5. There is good cause to believe that it is necessary to preserve and maintain the business records of Defendant Ford by prohibiting them from being moved, altered, or destroyed.

6. There is good cause to believe that it is necessary to quickly identify all assets in Defendant Ford’s possession or control.

7. There is good cause to believe that Defendant Ford may seek to leave the United States in order to avoid responsibility for the fraudulent acts alleged in the SEC’s Complaint and underlying motion.

8. There is good cause to believe that investor funds and assets may have been removed or transferred from the territory of the United States to another jurisdiction.

9. This proceeding is one in which the SEC seeks a preliminary injunction.

10. Expedited discovery is appropriate to permit a prompt and fair hearing on the SEC's motion for preliminary injunction.
